

ESTEY

If the people of Brattleboro and vicinity prefer some other piano than the ESTEY, at least buy a standard make. But don't go out of town with the idea that you are a close buyer and have saved yourself $50 or $100. There are just as clever people as you, and you will pay full price for your purchase.

Buy at home—of us or of the local dealers, but insist on a standard make. Don't buy anybody's 2nd or 3rd grade. It's dangerous.

There are good pianos sold for fair prices. Don't pay $300 for a name you never heard of before, when the same amount will buy a piano that costs to make, at least twice as much as the "unknown". A splendid stock of new Estey Pianos await your inspection.

Prices a little less than others ask for same grade. Terms reasonable.

The September report of the harvests holds out the promise of a rosier future for the country. The indicated yield of corn, 2,716,915,000 bushels, is the largest on record. The total indicated wheat crop is 794,447,000 bushels, which compares with the record yield of 748,460 bushels in 1901. At the prices now quoted, the value of the corn crop is $1,195,443,520. At the current price of wheat for May delivery at Chicago, the value of this crop is $605,844,420. The oat crop is valued at $274,700,000. The value of the three crops is $2,075,987,940, three times the amount of the bonded debt of the nation, and about twice the amount of the total public debt. There are other crops which contribute vastly to the grand total of the country's wealth.

The figures showing the average condition of these minor crops when harvested are exceedingly encouraging.

Senator Proctor held a conference at Burlington Saturday with ex-Gov. Ormabee of Brandon, Prof. Hills of the experiment station, C. S. Peck of Burlington and G. S. Fassett of Enosburgh, trustees of the state agricultural college, and others concerning the experiments to be conducted with a view to restoring the Morgan horse to the proud position which it formerly held. President Roosevelt and Secretary Wilson are interested in the project. The necessary appropriation is available, and the lines of work will be similar to those which are now being carried out in the breeding of coach horses at the Colorado state experiment station. The Vermont station will start with 10 to 12 animals, and the number will be increased later. There will be no lack of stock for the experiment, as many owners of Morgans in Vermont have already made application to have their animals used.

It is the intention of the Boston & Maine railroad company, as announced in the current annual report, to issue $10,000,000 of 4 per cent. refunding bonds, by which the annual fixed charges will be reduced by some $249,000. Also the company will issue $3,319 shares of common stock, one new share to every five old shares, the proceeds to be used in improvements and especially in enlarging the freight equipment of the road. The new issue will impose an additional dividend requirement of $423,000 a year. The company is said to have been very liberal in charging improvements to current costs of operation, but evidently this policy has not been prosecuted to the extent of adequately expanding and keeping up the freight equipment. The company's gross earnings for the fiscal year ending in 1905 were $46,800,000, an increase of $5,500,000 since 1901. This railroad company is distinctly a New England enterprise, for, with the exception of 122 miles of road in the state of New York and 28 miles in the Dominion of Canada, the 2286 miles of railroad now operated by the Boston & Maine company lies all within the states of Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

Perceval W. Clement's announcement of his candidacy for the governorship was timed to coincide with the annual meeting of the Vermont Fish and Game league, which has come to be regarded as the proper occasion for the launching of political boomerangs. In 1902 as the star exponent of an issue Clement developed unexpected strength, and the political state makers a jar and captured a majority of the cities and large towns of the state in the caucuses. His action in bolting the Republican convention, in which his issue had been given the demanded recognition but in which his candidacy was not endorsed, gave the impression that after all there was a good deal of the element of personal ambition in his fight, and this impression was deepened by his appearance again as a candidate. The policy on which he mainly forced the contest in 1902 is now generally regarded as settled. There is at least no disposition to re-open the issue next year. Perhaps some might substitute personal animosity as Clement's reason for coming into the field now, as he is antagonistic to the Proctor family, and Fletcher D. Proctor's name has been more generally mentioned as a candidate next year than that of any other man. In his fight against Mr. Proctor, Mr. Clement may have considered himself more available than any man whom he wished to support. Mr. Clement may add piquancy to the campaign, but we hardly look to him to be an important factor. He wants to be governor, and with his pet issue out of the way he can no longer pose simply as an exponent—he will be the exponent and issue combined—the whole "push" of the Clement campaign—and in this role it will be difficult to arouse enthusiasm, even by platform speaking, or a face-to-face canvass.

A LIFE SENTENCE

James Mitchell Pleaded Guilty to Murder in Second Degree

Att'y-Gen. Fitts' Review of the Case, with Interesting Facts Never Before Made Public.

Newfane, Vt., Sept. 14, 1905.

The case of state against James Mitchell for murder was called to trial at county court at Newfane Monday afternoon. Mitchell offered a plea of guilty to murder in the second degree.

After a conference with the state's attorney and Mr. Williams of Bellows Falls, Atty. Gen. Fitts made the following statement to the court:

"The state's attorney and I have carefully investigated the charge against this respondent. We have talked with the principal witnesses, and together viewed the scene of the crime, and have heard the story of the respondent and have investigated his life and antecedents at his former home in Waterbury, Conn. I can prove the following facts:

James Mitchell, the respondent, is of Scotch descent and is about 30 years old. He was born in Waterbury, Conn. The murdered woman was Linnie Rankin, wife of George Rankin of Waterbury. Her maiden name was Linnie Rankin. Her home was in Waterbury, also.

She and the respondent had been lovers in earlier days and were engaged to be married when the respondent enlisted in the United States navy and left and was not heard from for three or four years. During his absence, Linnie married George Rankin and one child was born to them. Linnie's sister was married to the respondent's brother.

The respondent returned from the navy about three years ago, came to Waterbury to his brother's house and found that in the same block Rankin and his wife were living. Mitchell and Linnie soon met and the old affection was renewed.

"The evidence will be conflicting as to which first proposed the idea of their running away and living together, but a considerable evidence would tend to show that the respondent proposed it, he being six years her senior, although the respondent claims that she proposed it. At any rate, they soon made the plan, carried it out and she left her husband, took the child and ran away with the respondent and from that time until last February, lived at different places in Connecticut, Pennsylvania and finally at Hagerstown, Md., with the respondent, they living in the same house, and she and her wife, and she being known as his wife. She claimed that her husband abused her.

Finally, last February, Linnie arranged with the respondent that she should come to Connecticut or Vermont and procure a divorce from her husband so that she and the respondent could be legally married, and she came on at that time to Waterbury, though she did not see her husband, she all the time keeping the child with her.

The latter part of June, she and her step-mother, who was also her own aunt, known and called in the family "Aunt Sue," came to Brattleboro, bringing the child with them, and went to the home of Linnie's brother, Dana Murgatroy, in Grafton. She also had an uncle there by the name of Dana Murgatroy. Her brother, Dana, his wife and family lived in a house in Grafton which was owned by the respondent, George S. Rice, a young unmarried man, and Linnie lived in the house of Dana Murgatroy. Linnie lived in the house all the time from then until her death. She soon secured employment at the hotel at Grafton as waitress, and was employed there until the day of the crime. She procured board for her child with a neighboring family.

All the time after she had left Mitchell at Hagerstown, Md., she had been in correspondence with him, and several of her letters passing between them are in the possession of the state's attorney. They are very affectionate both ways. He claims to have sent her money to help her out, and it appears that after she came to Grafton, she did talk about getting a divorce and was arranging to go to see a lawyer in Brattleboro, but had never done so.

Soon after she came to Grafton, a courtship sprang up between her and John Rice, the young man who owned the house in which she lived, where her brother lived. There is evidence to tend to show that this courtship was the result of the instigation of the step-mother, Aunt Sue. At that rate, Linnie began to quarrel with Rice and it came to the point where she agreed to marry him as soon as she could get her divorce. At about that time, Linnie began to quarrel with her step-mother, Aunt Sue, and the respondent, became colder, of which he immediately complained in his letters, and finally, on July 23d, he wrote her a long letter complaining bitterly of her coldness and finally saying that he suspected something was wrong and if he did not hear from her at once was compelled to leave her. The respondent's letter is now in the hands of the state's attorney.

He came to Grafton July 30, Sunday, and the hotel and inquired for her, was shown into the parlor and she was called and they met in the presence of the landlady. Their meeting was in the ordinary manner, she saying "Hello" and shaking hands. She was alone with him for a time and when she came out of the room she told the landlady who was there, and also the another woman, saying at the time that he had threatened to kill her if she did not do as he wished, something of that sort, and she appeared somewhat excited.

From that time until the time of the crime, Mitchell was in a state of excitement. He had a revolver with him, which he claims to have bought in Hagerstown, but with no intention of committing a crime with it. He did not exhibit the revolver until the time of the shooting, though some cartridges belonging to it were in a box and were about the house; he stopping all the time at the balance of his property to the respondent, George S. Rice, a young unmarried man, and Linnie lived in the house of Dana Murgatroy. Linnie lived in the house all the time from then until her death. She soon secured employment at the hotel at Grafton as waitress, and was employed there until the day of the crime. She procured board for her child with a neighboring family.

After Mitchell talked a good deal with members of the Murgatroy family about the affair and seemed much disturbed at the woman's conduct, claiming she was not "true" to him.

Before Mitchell came, the step-mother, Aunt Sue, had returned to Waterbury. After Mitchell was there and had talked with Rice, Rice wrote a letter directed to Aunt Sue, telling about Mitchell's arrival and going at some length into the matter of his own affair with Linnie
